

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

We acknowledge each of the researchers who contributed their leadership knowledge, personal enthusiasm, and professional experiences to the writing of this book, From Very Good to Despicable: The Impact of the Seven Deadly Sins on Contemporary Leaders, including:

Amylynn Benjamin, Dr. Ruth Anne Buzzard, Captain William Campbell, Dr. Marilyn Chapman-Allison, Dr. Renée Collins, Dr. Amanda Fernandes, and Dr. Jamie Dortch-Lanier. We appreciate their time, energy, and research acumen that they invested into the development of this book, especially, given the fact that all of them were working professionals with family obligations who were also in the midst of their own dissertation research.

We, specifically, recognize that each chapter author comprehensively and diligently used publicly available information about the characters of their respective chapters from a variety of sources as references to develop their specific examples of leadership behaviors related to the seven deadly sins. In addition, we respectfully appreciate their unanimous agreement to donate any and all of the royalties that may accrue from the sales of this book, in perpetuity, to the Niagara University PhD Program in Leadership and Policy. This should enable future doctoral candidates and students to have funding access for their research efforts in order to improve leadership and policies for the good of all in the finest Vincentian tradition.

We also thank Dr. Chandra Foote, Dean of the College of Education at Niagara University, for her ubiquitous constructivist orientation to learning in higher education that facilitated the creative environment where a student-oriented project like this book could be developed. In addition, we appreciate the editing assistance of Mrs. Tammy Bruno, Assistant Dean for Retention, Student Support, and Graduate Programs. Tammy is also a doctoral student in Niagara University's Leadership and Policy program and her commitment to this project as well as her encouragement to her colleagues to complete the book is acknowledged by the authors.

Last, but certainly not least, we recognize the research contributions of Rev. Dr. Augustine M. Ayaga who completed his PhD at Niagara University in Leadership and Policy in December of 2014. His comprehensive knowledge of religious history and traditions provided a solid foundation for this book.

Dr. Walter S. Polka
Editor
Professor of Professional Studies
Coordinator of the PhD Program
Niagara University, NY

Dr. Rosina E. Mete
Assistant Editor
PhD in Leadership & Policy
Niagara University, NY
Registered Psychotherapist
Ontario, Canada