

The Biology Department in conjunction with the Ostapenko Center for Race, Equality and Mission present as part of the Diversity in Science Seminar Series

“The languages of life: chemically mediated interactions in plant ecology & evolution”

Jordan Dowell a PhD student in the Conservation & Integrative Biology Department at the University of Central Florida will be discussing his research on how plants use volatile organic compounds to communicate with one another using sunflowers as a model organism.

Friday November 8th
12:20pm-1:15pm
Golisano 101

For questions or persons in need of accommodations, please contact Connie Guthrie Greene at cag@niagara.edu

The POWER of NIAGARA
University